A DISAPPOINTED SHAH.

Queer Story of a Prizefight In an English Royal Garden.

In his book of memories Major General Sir Owen Tudor Burns tells a story of the first visit of a shah to Great Britain:

The shah wanted to see a prizefight, with blood. After much anxious thought and consultation with Lord Queensberry an innocent glove fight was arranged in the Buckingham palace stables, to take place quietly half an hour before the shah was to receive Lord Shaftesbury and the archbishops and bishops with a memorial asking him to protect the interests of the Christians in Persia.

But the shah slept late. The prizefighters overlapped the prelates. A footman made a mistake in opening the door. Archbishops and bishops following the shah in a moment found themselves more or less in a ring round the two prizefighters. The bishops hustled back to the reception room, the fight was stopped, the shah was angry and disappointed, and Lord Shaftesbury was heard shouting: "A prizefight in the garden of the queen's palace forsooth! I will denounce you all over the kingdom!" Mutual explanations followed, the matter was set right, we sent special messages to the reporters to keep it out of the press, and I was later on privileged to explain it all to the queen, who took the matter much more calmly than her lord chamberlain. Once back, however, inside Buckingham palace, we all smoothed our ruffled feathers and listened to a most gloomy oration from Lord Shaftesbury.

The shah, angry at the interruption of his prizefight, turned round to Sir Henry Rawlinson and growled in Persian: "Hang the Christians in Persia! Tell them they're all right!" Rawlinson translated that into a long, eloquent and beautiful reply to the deputation, while doubtless the disappointed boxers were having a consolation scrap in the stables. Lord Shaftesbury did not denounce them, though the shah's bear leaders lived in terror for some days.

The lord chamberlain blamed me, I blamed the shah, the shah blamed the equerry, the equerry blamed the footman, the footman blamed every one all round, and we gave the prizefighters £5 apiece, with a resolution written in blood that never would any of us again arrange a prizefight, even for a shah of shahs, in a royal palace garden.

BEYOND THE GRAVE.

Victor Hugo's Views on the Question of a Future Life.

Victor Hugo's opinion on the question of life beyond the grave was a remarkable one. The great Frenchman was firmly convinced that he would meet all his friends in a future world. He was equally sure that he had always existed from the antediluvian times, when the Creator placed him on earth. He believed that he would exist forever, inasmuch as he felt in his soul thousands of hymns, dramas and poems that had never found expression.

When the atheists would say to him, "The proof that you will not exist in the future is that you did not exist in the past," Hugo would answer:

"Who told you I did not exist in the past centuries? You will say that is the legend of the ages. The poet has written, 'Life is a fairy tale twice written.' He might have said a thousand times written. You do not believe in the doctrine of surviving personalities for the reason that you do not recollect your anterior existence. But how can the recollection of vanished ages remain imprinted on your memory when you do not remember a thousand and one scenes and events of your present life? Since 1802 there have been ten Victor Hugos in me. Do you think that I can recall all their actions and all their thoughts?

"The tomb is dark, and when I shall have passed the tomb to emerge into light once more all these Victor Hugos will be almost wholly strangers to me, but it will always be the same soul."—Scrap Book.

He Could Walk.

All are not soldiers who wear a uniform, as General Lew Wallace found out at Fort Donelson. He saw four soldiers carrying a fifth, who seemed to be wounded.

"Can't that man walk without assistance?" asked Wallace.

"Oh, no!" said the men. "He is dying."

Just then a shell exploded near by, and the four men dropped their burden and fled. The man who was supposed to be wounded leaped to his feet and ran even faster than the others.

He Liked the Family.

"Dick proposed to me last night."

"What did you tell him?"

"I said he had better ask mamma. And what do you think the wretch said?"

"Goodness knows."

"He said he had asked her already, and she wouldn't have him."

A Settler.

Friend—Didn't your husband rave when you showed him the dressmaker's bill? Wife—Rather. Friend—And how did you quiet him? Wife—I showed him the milliner's next, and then he became absolutely speechless.

Trouble.

"Sometimes I think I have more troubles than any other man on earth."

"Nonsense! Look at Thompson. He's got a wife, an automobile and a sure system for beating the races."—Leslie's Weekly.

A moment's patience is ten years' comfort.—Greek Proverb.

Sue's Trousseau

By WILLIAM BRYAN.

Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.

"I don't suppose that there is anything more to be said," Susie whispered, looking up into Lambert's face.

"There is a lot more to be said," declared Lambert. "Uncle Jim is guardian of my inheritance until I am twenty-five, but he has no right to prevent my marrying you."

"But you will lose the fortune if you marry without his consent," she reminded.

"I can work," he declared, "I would rather be poor and work for you than to have the income and be at Uncle Jim's mercy. He wants the money for himself, and it goes to himself if I marry without his consent, so he won't give his consent."

"We can wait," she suggested. "It is only three years. There will never be any one but you, dear. I would not want to feel that in marrying me you had destroyed your prospects."

"And be unhappy for three years for the sake of dad's money?" he said bitterly. "You can't buy three years even with half a million, Sue. That clause was only put in because dad was afraid that I might marry one of the Spencer girls. Uncle Jim is taking advantage of the clause to make me miserable. He was only father's stepbrother anyway. I don't see why dad ever made such a will."

"He had a right to dispose of his money as he saw fit," she said gravely. "We shall have to wait, dear."

"I'll carry you off by force," he threatened. "I tell you I won't wait."

But in the end Susie had her own way. It seemed hard that their marriage was dependent upon the whim of James Frazier, but the late Horace Lambert had been twice beaten at law by Mrs. Spencer, and when the will was made it looked very much as if Lawrence Lambert would marry Grace Spencer.

That was before the boy met Susie Ronalds. Later Mr. Lambert had planned to alter his will, but Frazier had counseled against it, and in the end Mr. Lambert had passed away, leaving his son at the mercy of his shrewd but unscrupulous stepbrother.

Frazier had encouraged Larry's courtship of Susie, but when his formal consent had been asked it had been withheld without any reason, and the more young Lambert stormed the better Frazier seemed to like it. He felt very certain that Larry could not wait for three years and that the family fortune would revert to himself.

That he was more than comfortably rich did not matter. He was of the type in whom possession begets desire for more, and he was deaf to all arguments advanced by Lambert.

He went placidly about his business and apparently had lost all interest in the matter; but, though his mind appeared engrossed with oil wells, he was keenly aware of Lambert's impetuous mood, and he watched the restless lover with avaricious eyes.

That the marriage did not take place was no fault of Lambert's, who begged and stormed alternately. "I won't wait three years," he declared impetuously after one of these meetings. "I want to marry you now, whether Uncle Jim likes it or not."

"I think he will like it soon," she said, with a smile. "I don't want to say anything, but I've an idea that it will come out all right."

"There's Uncle Jim now," he said in surprise as the familiar team turned a curve in the road. "I wonder what he's up to."

"Perhaps he has come to give his consent," she said, with an odd laugh.

"Very likely," agreed Larry, with a grin. "I declare, he is going to stop here."

Frazier lumbered through the yard and up to the front door. "Is your mother in?" he demanded as Susie answered the knock. "I just want to see her a moment."

She ushered him into the parlor and rejoined Larry in the sitting room. All that took place came clearly through the folding doors.

"I just dropped in to see you about that south meadow," began Frazier, when the greetings had been concluded. "I bought the Davis farm, and it struck me that the meadow would go better with the Davis property than with yours. It's like a separate farm to you, with the car tracks running between that and the rest of your land."

"I don't care to sell," said Mrs. Rolands quietly. "I had thought to sell it to get Susie's wedding things, but now she's not to be married there's no need to sell."

"I'd give a pretty good price for it," he said carelessly. "I'd have to drain off that swamp that lies partly in your plot and partly in Davis' farm. Five hundred ought to be a pretty fair price."

"I don't want to sell," was the firm answer. "We've always called that 'Sue's trousseau,' and I shan't sell until she needs one."

"I wanted to see you about that, too," he went on uneasily. "I've been thinking it over, and it doesn't seem fair to the young folks to make 'em wait three years. I did think that Lawrence was too young, but he's changed amazingly lately, and I was going to say that if you still approve I'd say 'Yes' too. It may steady the boy to get married."

"Suppose you see them about it," she suggested, rising and going to the door. He followed her into the sitting room, where, with bluff heartiness, he formally gave his consent to the marriage.

"Not only that," he declared expansively, "but I'll make the price of that meadow piece $600 so as to get the young folks started off right. I'll bring the papers over tomorrow."

"Well, if Sue really is to be married," began Mrs. Reynolds hesitatingly.

"If!" he shouted with boorish heartiness. "To be sure she is. I'll have the lawyer witness my consent while he's drawing up the deed to the meadow land."

He stamped out of the house in high good humor and Larry turned to the two women.

"What is the meaning of all this?" he asked. "Is it magic?"

"The magic of money," smiled Mrs. Ronalds. "Your uncle has been tapping the Davis farm, and I guess he got over the line into our lot."

"If that meadow is oil land, it's worth a lot more than $600," he said, indignantly. "Do you mean to say you are going to let him swindle you just for the sake of obtaining his consent?"

"We are willing to let the plot go," was the woman's quiet answer.

Larry swore that he would not permit the sacrifice, but the two women only laughed, and he left with the determination to force his uncle to refuse the offer.

Frazier smiled paternally.

"My dear boy," he said blandly, "that lot has one of the best wells I know of. We struck oil almost on the surface. When the land is mine and I can sink the shaft it'll be worth a fortune. You have enough money for yourself and the girl. That should be sufficient."

Larry rushed out of the house and back to the Ronalds home. The arguments the women advanced must have been sound, for when Frazier came with the title deeds the next day Larry suggested that he and the notary act as witnesses to their marriage. The gray haired old minister stepped forward and completed the ceremony, and Frazier was eager to congratulate the bride.

"Here's the money for the trousseau," he cried, as he pressed a roll of bills into her hands. "Now if your mother will sign the deed, we'll be all through."

Mrs. Ronalds affixed her signature, and Frazier thrust the document deep into his pocket. He turned into the road leading past his new purchase. "I want to show you a pretty bit of land," he told his companion, the notary. "It's got one of the best oil wells in the state or I lose my guess, and I don't think I often make a mistake. Get up!"

The last remark was addressed to the horse, for in the field he had just bought a gang of workmen were tearing up the soil.

"What are you doing there?" he demanded as he dashed up. "That is my property."

"Just fixing the pipe line," explained the foreman. "I suppose the oil that got in the marsh the time of the wreck gave some one the idea that there was oil here. Anyhow, he's sunk his drill right into our main pipe line, confound him."

And Frazier drove on, echoing the last two words. "Sue's trousseau" had not been salted—just oiled.

A Teacher's Last Resort.

By the laws of Maryland corporal punishment in the public schools of that state is forbidden. This prohibition was much condemned by certain of the teachers with old fashioned ideas, especially by a teacher in one of the schools of the Eastern Shore some years ago. He was a strapping big fellow, and it was lucky for his pupils, who were rather a tough lot, that they were protected by the aforementioned law.

The teacher did the best he could under the circumstances, but moral suasion proving of little avail he finally laid his case before the board of trustees.

"Gentlemen," he said after a recital of his trials, "those boys must be licked."

"You can't do that," replied the chairman.

"Then you must assist me in controlling them."

"That, sir," observed the chairman testily, "is what you are employed to do."

"In that case," continued the teacher, "you must allow me to lick them."

"Corporal punishment is against the law," insisted the chairman.

"Then, gentlemen," concluded the teacher, with considerable emphasis, "some one must be licked, and I want to say right here that the next time I have trouble with my boys I'm going to lick a trustee. As I have trouble about once a day, each one of you may expect on the average one licking per week. I reckon there's no law against that."—Rochester Herald.

The Baggage System In England.

"So you are going abroad, eh?" said a railroad man. "Well, watch your luggage over there. The system is abominable.

"They don't, you know, have our simple and satisfactory check system. In England, for instance, no one is responsible for your luggage but yourself. You get a porter to put it in the baggage car, and when you reach your destination you pick it out with another porter's help, put it on a cab and drive off. Any one could steal it. Often luggage thefts occur.

"I often wondered why the English railroads, which in many respects are so good, didn't adopt our American check system. Last year, asking an English railroad man, I found out.

"If the English roads adopted the check system they would be responsible for luggage, as our roads are. The English law does not make them responsible. Therefore, of course, they do nothing that will lay such a responsibility upon them. But they acknowledge that our luggage system is fine, while theirs is execrable. And they have a registering system—a mere begging of the question—for which you have to pay extra."

ANCESTRAL APPETITES.

Table Feats of Some Famous Feeders of Bygone Days.

A generation holding critical views on a man's intelligent, or unwise, choice of parents is not likely to indulge in ancestor worship. But there are at least one or two things in which our ancestors were truly greater than we of the present day can ever aspire to be. Take them, for instance, at table. If ancient books on table etiquette are to be taken seriously, and there is no reason why they should not be, the ancestor was in the habit of gnawing bones a la chien and of disposing of them by the simple means of throwing them under the table or over his shoulder. He worked hard with his hands in the dishes, when a succulent but slippery morsel refused to come to him by means of knife and fork. He used his table napkin for unspeakable purposes and his fork in utter forgetfulness as comb or toothbrush. In one sense, therefore, he did not know how to eat. Meanwhile, in another, he was truly great for the quantities of food which he caused to disappear at a single meal were nothing short of marvelous.

The records preserved of the ancestor's feats of the fork (and the finger) are woefully thin, but now and again one of these very human documents in the form of a menu is unearthed and tells its own story. Such is the following list of dishes served in 1334 to a worthy citizen of Valencia on the occasion of his taking unto himself a wife. Across the space of close upon the six centuries the cranes and lampreys, the peacocks and boar's head of the feast made fine display. This is the order in which the fourteenth century wedding breakfast was served:

MENU.

Roast crane, venison, lamprey.
Peacock, pheasant, guinea fowl, osprey, snipe, pike,
Baked pomegranates, burnt almonds, vegetables, fish,
Eel pie and toast.
Galantine of sprats and cheese cakes.
Peacock, crane, pheasant.
Crayfish, boar's head and savouries.
Figs, medlars and wafers.
Wines.
Saint Jangon, Branne, Burgundy and Hock.

The Italians also were famous feeders and seem to have distinguished themselves in particular during the early days of the renaissance. The Bourbons valiantly followed suit, one of the most distinguished successes being scored by Louis XIV., of whom an eyewitness wrote: "I often saw him eat four plates of soup, a whole pheasant, a guinea fowl, a large dish of salad, several slices of mutton with garlic sauce, two large slices of ham, a dish of cake and dessert." The threats of his physicians finally reduced his majesty to such meager fare as two plates of pigeon broth and three roast fowls. According to Arenberg, the great king was later in life subject to attacks of indigestion.

The little suppers in the reign of the next Louis, though on a slightly less gigantic scale, are still sufficiently impressive. The Marquise d'Artenay, for instance, put before her guests after they came from the theater and before they went on to a dance this collation:

Pigeon soup, with lentils and carrots.
Chicken broth.
Patties of fowl, veal, capon, pheasants, guinea fowl.
Sweetbread and roast poulets.
Baked starlings, wood pigeons, wild duck and snipe.
Cakes. Sweets. Fruit.

It seems a pity no record is preserved of what happened at the dance following this supper party.

Just as Good.

Flasherly—Such a joke! Kit talked to a wax figure for half an hour thinking it was Cholly Saphead.

Dasherly—How on earth did she discover her mistake?

The Modesty of Women

Naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures. It is strictly non-alcoholic, non-secret, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper; contains no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice. Some of these numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients, will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of KNOWN COMPOSITION. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound.

If sick consult the Doctor, free of charge by letter. All such communications are held sacredly confidential.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate and regulate stomach, liver and bowels.

SONOMA INDEX-TRIBUNE

Sonoma, Sonoma County, Cal., June 15, 1907.

H. H. GRANICE, Editor.

What the Conviction of Schmitz Means for Stricken San Francisco.

The conviction of Mayor Schmitz on a charge of extortion will go a long way toward purifying public affairs in the metropolis and will put out of harm's way one of the most despicable public servants ever elected to office by an over-confiding people. The crime for which San Francisco's chief executive is to pay the penalty is the more monstrous when it is taken into consideration that he had thrice been honored with the highest trust within the power of his people to bestow upon any man and that he betrayed that trust by corrupting every department of the municipalty over which he held full sway.

At first glance it looked very much like the disgraced Mayor was ut the tool of Abe Reuf, but the investigation into the rottenness of San Francisco's administration so far as it has progressed now makes it plain that Schmitz is a past master in the art of graft and extortion and that he and not Reuf was the biggest villain of the two. In short he used Rueff as a go-between in his schemes of municipal hold-ups.

The conviction and imprisonment of Schmitz means everything for poor, stricken San Francisco, which has had the sympathies of the entire civilized world in her misfortunes of earthquake, fire, strikes and corrupt administration. It means a new Mayor, a new Board of Supervisors, Board of Public Works, Police Commission, Board of Education and the weeding out of the army of grafters who have so long been doing the bidding of the convicted and disgraced Mayor and levying tribute on the decent, law-abiding citizens of the unfortunate city. It means that the wheels of industry which have so long been clogged by strikes and graft in the metropolis will now move smoothly. It means the restoration of confidence in the future of the city and the introduction of outside capital. In short it means the realization of the new San Francisco which we have read and heard so much about.

How Troubles are Ventilated

Sonoma is not the only town that has troubles for it is evident from the press of Fresno that this big city of the San Joaquin is in hot water. The papers chronicle the fact that there is a lack of enthusiasm over a proposed celebration there of our great national holiday, the Fourth of July. Some of the leading business men refuse to come through with suitable subscriptions and as a result there has been a rumpus. The city council now threatens to compile a list of "undesirable citizens" and have it published in the Fresno papers. It will undoubtedly be interesting to know "who is who" in Fresno, but one thing is certain the editors who publish the list will have to bear the brunt of the storm which this method of exposure will stir up. Those who are bawled out will forget all about the originator of the method but will have the editor in view and attach all the blame to him. Newspaper men usually form the publication of all official matter, but in this instance it would be better for the scribes if the city officials would post the notices of Fresno's "undesirable citizens."

All cities have their silurians and cranks but the outside world well knows from its progress what the majority of Fresno's citizens are. It is gratifying to read that the city council is composed of the live and progressive faction and that the members have backbone enough to publish the sleepers and give the editors a chance to get themielves disliked. If communities could not see their editors scrapping over something life would become very monotonous. However, in the composing room the editor makes ready and sometimes kicks the press just for the exercise that will serve him in good stead when he starts the knocker down the stairs. Such is life journalistic.

A Frisco Chorus.

There's a sardonic grin on the face at the phone,
For the wrongs of the past, Glass is to atone;
Not in vain have we suffered or awaited our numbers
'Till we ground down our teeth and cursed in e'en slumbers.
The reckoning day is at hand for subscriber,
Mr. Glass (drink it down) but they say your a briber;
We're charitable patrons of your infernal concern
But it is a fact that the worms sometimes turn.
We wish you no harm, on the contrary pray
That you'll get your number over the Bay.

It sometimes occurs to us that comment in this column should be made of a local nature in order to interest, for it is generally the case that the familiar appeals and that local topics are relished where others are passed over or perused most indifferently. However it should be and is the function of the press, whether of city or country, to keep its readers in touch with current topics both at home or abroad and to set forth opinion and comment thereon. The Index-Tribune aims to broaden its readers and so we enter into the discussion of affairs on the outside as well as those purely local. The press of larger towns and cities has no more local subjects in their columns than do we, which goes to show that Sonoma keeps things moving as lively as any of her sister localities.

It shall be optional with the Committee to exact a bond from the party asking for such permit, with at least two sureties, in lieu of such deposit, conditioned that said party asking for said permit shall properly and satisfactorily refill all excavation or excavations made pursuant to the provisions of this Ordinance

Section 4. The Committee granting the permit may revoke it at any time when the work is not being done according to the requirements and satisfaction of the Committee.

Section 5. The provisions of Sections 2, 3 and 4 of this Ordinance shall not apply to any excavation or work that may be authorized by the Board of Trustees of the City of Sonoma.

CONVENT SCHOOL'S CLOSING EXERCISES.

Will Take Place at Union Hall This Evening—The Progam.

The closing exercises of the Presentation Convent school will be held this evening in Union Hall. The exercises promise to be very entertaining and the good sisters of the convent, who have had the training of the pupils, will undoubtedly give a good account of their work through their young charges. The progam of the evening's entertainment follows:

"Tourbillon," overture, Mattie; Misses M. Pinelli and I. Trudgen. "Little Maids of Timbuctoo," song and drill, Junior girls. "At the School Festival," Streabbog, Masters A. Valente, I. Mei and P. Yenni. "Invitation, etc.," two part chorus, Weigand. "Patria," march, Gobbearts, Misses L. Equi, E. and M. Gericke. Flag drill, Junior boys.

"OLGA, OR OUT OF THE SHADOWS INTO THE LIGHT."

Argument—About six years after his happy marriage with a highly respectable American lady, Count Laski, a Russian offender, was captured by officers and sentenced to the Siberian mines. He begged his wife to remain in the United States to guard their children, but after a dreadful struggle with mother-love, love for her husband prevailed; and so in an agony of sorrow she decided to cleave to him in his hour of supreme trial. By some strange fatality the two little girls, left to the care of a dear, true friend, were separated soon after their parents departure, remaining utterly oblivious of each other's existence for the long space of ten years. The providence of God was not forgetful of them, and as the plot of the drama unfolds we shall see that providence manifested in the series of events which at length culminates in their lifelong reunion.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT AT EL VERANO.

H. F. Lord, the Well-known Tailor, Badly Injured and His Horse Killed.

A serious automobile accident happened in El Verano last Saturday evening about 6 o'clock. Two men were seriously injured, a horse killed and an automobile and buggy demolished.

Eddie Wolfe, the young chauffeur who runs the El Verano Villa automobile, was speeding along Riverside avenue and through some mischance collided with a light buggy in which was seated H. F. Lord, the well-known tailor, and a friend from San Francisco. There was a crash following the collision and the occupants of both automobile and buggy were thrown violently to the ground, the most seriously hurt being Mr. Lord and the chauffeur. Both of whom were injured internally besides suffering many contused wounds. Mr. Lord was taken to his home and Dr. Thomson called in to attend to his injuries, which are not so serious as at first reported and he will be up and around shortly.

The chauffeur was picked up by a party of guests of the Bellevue Hotel and taken to that resort where his injuries were attended to by a surgeon who happened to be sojourning there. He was found to be badly shaken up and bruised but, like Mr. Lord, escaped without broken bones.

The horse driven and owned by Mr. Lord was so badly injured that he was shot by Deputy Sheriff Ryan to put him out of his misery.

The automobile was badly smashed as was also the buggy. The damage to the former is estimated at $300.

The accident came so swiftly and so unexpectedly that neither the occupants of the automobile or buggy know exactly how it happened.

Have all Been Captured Except One Man.

All the prisoners who escaped from the county jail, by overpowering the jailor, on Friday evening of last week, have all been recaptured with the exception of Tom Williams, who is still at large.

Jack Anderson, the convicted burglar and the most dangerous of the escapes, was captured in Vallejo last Tuesday by the constable of that place who turned the prisoner over to Sheriff Jack Smith who returned the escape to his old quarters in the county jail at Santa Rosa last Wednesday morning.

Anderson says he spent the Friday night after his escape in the Santa Rosa creek and on the following morning cut across Bennett valley. Sunday morning he passed through Glen Ellen about one o'clock in the morning. Most of Sunday was spent in lying in the brush on Sonoma creek. He did most of his traveling by night and early Tuesday morning he was arrested by the Vallejo constable on the wharf in South Vallejo. He was taken to jail there, and then according to Anderson's statement, he had the first food since his escape. He looks as if his story might be true.

It was supposed that Anderson, and the other escape, Tom Williams, were traveling together, but according to Anderson's statement, they separated the first night out. He says that Williams returned to Santa Rosa last Friday night and hung around there getting out of town again on Saturday morning. Anderson denies that he took Jailer La Pointe's pistol from the bureau drawer in the latter's bed room at the jail. He says Joe Forgett took the pistol, as he knew where it was prior to the break.

Anderson claims that when he returned to the county jail from Judge Seawell's court, where he had been convicted on a charge of grand larceny, he found that the plot to escape had already been fixed up and the other prisoners concerned told him of it and asked him to "stand in" which he did.

DID HYDE RANCH VICTIM SUICIDE.

After Coroner's Verdict of Death from Natural Causes Evidence of Suicide is Discovered.

Platt Lupton, a mulatto laborer, employed on the Hyde ranch, was found dead in his cabin Wednesday. The remains were discovered by James Small, and the man had evidently expired that morning. He had been on a protracted spree in this place for a few days previous to his death and had returned to the Hyde ranch last Monday. The deceased, who was about 55 years of age, formerly lived in Humboldt county.

The remains were brought here and an inquest was held by Coroner Blackburn. The verdict of the jury was that the unfortunate man died from natural causes, and that he was a victim of alcoholism.

A startling discovery was made the morning following the above verdict, and that the man committed suicide does not now admit of a reasonable doubt. While Jas. Small, an employee on the Hyde ranch, was cleaning out the cabin in which Lupton died, he found a small memorandum book in an inside pocket of one of the coats of the deceased, which had been overlooked in the search for evidence leading to his death. On one of the leaves of the book was written the following in the handwriting of the dead man:

"To the Editor of the Blue Lake Advocate: Please publish this rash act. I am tired of living." On the opposite page was written: "Poison-cyanide."

SUDDEN DEATH OF CITY VISITOR.

James Benn, a San Francisco Brewer, Victim of Heart Failure.

James Benn, a guest at the Bellevue Hotel, El Verano, died very suddenly and unexpectedly at 6 15 o'clock Thursday morning. He had retired to his room the night before in fair health. The next morning his room mate heard him snoring and shortly afterward the snoring ceased. He then approached the bed occupied by Benn and gave him a vigorous shake with the purpose of arousing him, when he was horrified to discover that he was dead.

Dr. A. B. Curtis of San Francisco, who occupied a room near that of deceased, was hastily summoned only to discover that the man had breathed his last. The cause was asthma and heart failure.

The deceased, who has a family in San Francisco, had been employed for thirty years in the Hibernia Brewery. He was a native of Ireland and aged 59 years.

The remains were shipped to the metropolis yesterday morning by undertaker Bates.

Disturbing the Peace.

A warrant was sworn out in Judge Small's court Tuesday charging certain parties with disturbing the peace. The case will be ventilated in the Justice Court Monday.

Heavy Rainfall.

This valley was visited by a heavy rainfall Monday night which continued until Tuesday morning. The precipitation was nearly an inch and the ground received a thorough soaking. A brisk breeze sprang up Tuesday afternoon which rapidly dispelled the moisture, and cut hay and the cherry crop escaped with slight damage.

It set in raining again, however, Wednesday night and developed into a downpour lasting until daylight Thursday morning, the precipitation being heavier than that of Monday night. This last rain did much damage to the cherry crop. This delayed rainfall, however, was beneficial to uncut hay, corn and garden truck in general.

Mrs. Lindsay kept her seat in the vehicle and received many compliments for her coolness and presence of mind. The runaway caused little damage.

BATTLE OF SAN JACINTO.

The Desperate Fight That Heralded the Dawn of Texan Freedom.

On the morning of the 21st of April, 1836, the day chosen for the battle which was to decide the fate of Texas, Houston's first words had been, "The sun of Austerlitz has risen again." He had then called a council of war and asked the opinion of his six field officers as to whether they should attack the enemy or wait for the attack to come from them.

The four senior officers strangely counseled delay, but their arguments did not convince Houston, who declared that the hour for action had arrived and plainly announced the intention on his own responsibility to risk a general engagement. He then dispatched Deaf Smith, his most trusty scout, to cut down the bridge which offered the only means of escape to either army.

"Make the best of your way," he had said in his habitual tone of kindly friendship, "to Vince's bridge, cut it down and burn it up and come back like eagles or you will be too late for the day." And just as the first charge was starting a horseman flecked with foam from his panting charger had dashed along the lines of the patriot army, as Houston had arranged that he should do, calling out clearly that all might hear, this deathknell to all hopes of possible escape: "I have cut down Vince's bridge! Now, fight for your lives and remember the Alamo!"

The Texan army, with Houston riding at the front of the center column, had then dashed forward against the Mexican breastworks, behind which stood the army of Santa Anna, drawn up in perfect order and calmly reserving its fire for short range. Their first volley, however, by the grace of a divine Providence, as the Texans declared, went too high. Houston's leg was shattered at the ankle and his horse severely wounded, but his columns still advanced uninjured.

Then came the answering volley, "poured into the very bosoms" of the astonished Mexicans—unable to reload and without bayonets for the charge. The Texans had "clubbed their muskets" and dealt desperate blows, and finally, when they had thus battered their way into the very center of the Mexican army, they had drawn their murderous bowie knives and "literally cut their way through dense masses of living flesh."

The battle had lasted only twenty minutes, but in that time a new nation had been born into the world. "From the battle of San Jacinto," said Webster in 1842, "the war was at an end."—Metropolitan Magazine.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Too many of us consider an excuse a reason.

Everything sounds like an encore to some men.

The philosophical person is apt not to be when considering troubles of his own.

Many a man who thinks he is getting into a peach orchard really finds his way into a lemon grove.

There are lots of answers to the question, "What's the use?" but the man who asks it never wants one.

When an acquaintance says to you, "I am going to be honest with you," brace yourself to hear something disagreeable.

Most of us when we ride a free horse start out on a walk, quicken into a brisk trot, then break into a wild gallop and are thrown.—Atchison Globe.

Good For Twenty.

"Lawyers get stung as easily as other people," said one who practices in the criminal courts. "Here's what happened to me the other day: A friend of mine tipped me off that there was a case coming up in special sessions and it would be easy to get the defendant, a negro, free.

"'There's a twenty in it for you,' he added. "I've got another case on upstairs or I would take it myself.'

"Sure enough, I got the fellow off, and when we reached the corridor I politely intimated that I had heard there was a twenty awaiting me for my trouble.

"'Sure thing, boss,' said the negro, diving into his pockets. 'It certainly am worth twenty, all right.' Without a smile he handed over two dimes."—New York Sun.

Colds and Bald Heads.

A baldheaded physician said: "I used to be dreadfully subject to colds even in the summer. I had to wear a black skullcap all the time. The minute I took it off I began to sneeze and wheeze. But now for a year I have not once worn a skullcap, and I have not once had a cold. Why, I could go and stand bareheaded in a snowstorm without any ill effect. My immunity to colds comes from this: Every morning I put my head under the cold water spigot and let the cold water run for a minute on my bald crown. This is a refreshing thing, and since I began to do it I have never had a cold."—Milwaukee Journal.

The Moorhen.

What could be more perfect defense than the device of the moorhen? She sinks herself in the water beneath an overhanging root or bank, leaving only her bill in sight. And that looks like a fallen leaf. You may stand within six feet of her, and she will not move, so sure is she that her ruse will succeed.—London Standard.

Galiano's Quinine Hair Tonic,

Joe Galiano, at First Street East, Pinelli building, has introduced into Sonoma a hair tonic, called Quinine Tonic, which is a wonderful remedy for the prevention of baldness. Mr. Galiano has had many years experience under a first-class physician in Europe. A great number of cases of baldness are caused by indigestion, and not as is presumed, by a disease of the scalp. It is not claimed that Quinine Tonic will grow hair on a bald head, as a number of fake tonics are advertised to do, but it is claimed and guaranteed that Quinine Tonic will stop the hair from falling out, and if used twice a week will clear the head from dandruff which will not return as long as the Tonic is used. Quinine Tonic is composed of the five following articles: Pure Alcohol, Quinine, Sulphur, Glycerine and Tumeric. If the Tonic is used and not found as represented, Galiano will refund the money. The Quinine Tonic will also save the trouble of shampooing the hair. This Tonic is for sale at both drug stores in Sonoma.

A Big Fan.

A good deal of royal significance has been given to fans. They were symbols of authority in Mexico before the conquest. Queen Mary of England received on New Year's day in 1556 "7 fannes to keep the hete of the fyre." Queen Elizabeth favored the custom that a fan was the only present a sovereign could receive from a subject. Fans have not always been dainty trifles. Jean de Balzac, a French writer of the seventeenth century, wrote from Italy during the reign of Louis XIV. of the enormous fans in use there suspended from the ceiling and worked by four servants. He says, "I have a fan that makes wind enough in my chamber to wreck a ship."

The Stone Was Not Thrown.

Genevieve's father occupied the pulpit. "Let him who is without sin among you be first to cast a stone," he chose for a text. Genevieve listened earnestly to the ensuing discourse. At the close of the service her mother tried in vain to dislodge her from the ministerial pew. Genevieve stood her ground till the rest of the congregation had passed out, then she looked up with a sigh of relief. "Well," she said, "I guess they've all sinned. Anyhow, nobody threw it."—New York Globe.

A Thorough Optimist.

"Father," said the small boy, "what is an optimist?"

"An optimist, my son, is a man who believes the weather bureau when its predictions are favorable and who congratulates himself on its unreliability when they are not."—Washington Star.

Its Hours.

"This watch will last a lifetime," remarked the jeweler as he handed the watch to the customer.

"Nonsense!" retorted the other. "Can't I see for myself that its hours are numbered?"

Every Man His Own Doctor.

The average man cannot afford to employ a physician for every slight ailment or injury that may occur in his family, nor can he afford to neglect them, as so slight an injury as the scratch of a pin has been known to cause the loss of a limb. Hence every man must from necessity be his own doctor for this class of ailments. Success often depends upon prompt treatment, which can only be had when suitable medicines are kept at hand. Chamberlain's Remedies have been in the market for many years and enjoy a good reputation. They sell for 25 cents a bottle.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough.

Chamberlain's Pain Balm (an antiseptic liniment) for cuts, bruises, burns, sprains, swellings, lame back and rheumatic pains.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for constipation, biliousness and stomach troubles.

Chamberlain's Salve for diseases of the skin.

One bottle of each of these five preparations costs but $1.25.

A "Touching" Story.

The young lady who had sat for a crayon portrait was not altogether pleased with the result. "It looks like me, of course," she said, inspecting it doubtfully, "and yet I think there are some things about it that ought to be changed."

She suggested that the eyes should have rather more of an upward look, that the right hand should be a little less prominent, that the hair should be made more wavy and that certain changes ought to be made in the drapery.

"That would require a great deal of retouching," said the artist, "and I should have to charge you about $10 additional."

"Oh, dear!" she exclaimed with a pout. "I shall have to give it up. Papa won't stand my 'retouching' him to that extent."

A Happy Mother

will see that her baby is properly cared for—to do this a good purgative is necessary. Many babies suffer from worms and their mothers don't know it—if your baby is feverish and don't sleep at nights, it is troubled with worms. White's Cream Vermifuge will clean out these worms in a mild pleasant way. Once tried always used. Give it a trial. Price 25 cents.
